Famous Players

The Marauders have always enjoyed the taint of Chaos, despite the fact they are a Human team. They have never been afraid to take on players who are different to the 'norm' shall we say.

Famous faces to have worn the Marauder jersey includes -

- Bob Bifford (Ogre)
- Karla von Kill (Human)
- Withergasp Doubledrool (Beastman)
- Massif "Hungry" Bofine (Minotaur)
- Uthar Hagg (Half Orc).

Staff

The Marauders were coached by Goran Slaver, a man of particularly violent tendencies. One season he killed his own assistant with a chainsaw!

When the Marauders became the Maulers, ex-club captain Uther Hagg became the Head Coach.

The club's mascot was a goat named Janet. Alas the whereabouts of poor Janet remain a mystery!

The Middenheim Marauders

- By Dolf Ungerhaagen

The Middenheim Marauders franchise still exists, but they have changed quite a lot over the years. We're covering here their early history where they played as a Human team before a merger and the inclusion of Dwarfs and Halflings on the roster.

Stadium

In earlier and simpler times, the Marauders played in the Karl Franz arena, formerly known as the Middenheim Arena. It was a large stadium seating up to 83,000 people for each game. The stadium was known for its temperate weather during games and officials who were surprisingly good!

History

2465 - After a successful season, the Marauders were all killed in a mysterious flying carpet accident. The following season, the Blood Bowl winning Champions of Death team looked strangely like the lost Marauders. Tomolandry assured everyone that this was purely a coincidence!

2472 - Bob Bifford comes out of retirement and is signed for one game by the Marauders to play against the Chaos All-Stars. The game is famous for the clash between Bob and Morg N'Thorg. Bob came out on top, flattening Morg and scoring the winning touchdown while whistling the Middenheim city anthem.

2477 - The Marauders lose the Blood Bowl final to the Skavenblight Scramblers 3-1 in a torturous match that lasts a massive 9 hours! Exhausting!

2486 - Karla von Kill is signed for the Middenheim Marauders and quickly goes on to make her name

2489 - After the collapse of the NAF, the team get into financial trouble. They change their name to The Marauders, sell their stadium and become a touring team. The financial troubles continue to follow them however and so in order to stay in business, they merge with the Middenland Maulers. The new team, the Middenheim Maulers, are very multi-racial but the Marauders had rarely just fielded humans historically.

Cross Code

The Marauders famously played in a Blood Bowl exhibition match against the Blood Axes who are normally a Dungeon Bowl team. The Blood Axes failed to understand the fact that one teams starts with the ball rather than needing to find it. This led to a crushing 15-0 defeat as they frantically tried to find non-existent chests!

Tanks very much

The Marauders played in the only game so far to feature a Goblin tank fielded, by the Evil Gits. Luckily Massif Bofine was on hand to rip open the tank with his horns and scoff Stranglegut the unfortunate goblin tank driver. He was soon spat out however, as Massif explained later, he didn't like "canned meat"!

Albion Wanderers

- By Gerhardt Schtumpf

The Wanderers are a secretive bunch! Hailing from the far-off misty isle of Albion and coached by Bob Berobsson , they proved to be a better cup than league team.

The Wanderers took a long while to adapt to Blood Bowl outside of Albion where the rules were slightly different. Their first games were a disaster, including an incident where the Gouged Eye spit roast and ate 3 of their players in front of them on the sidelines!

They played in the AFC Northern Division but rarely made an impact. That contrasts heavily to their record in the other majors where they enjoyed significant success. They won the Whiteskull Challenge Cup in 2433 and then after it changed its name to the Chaos Cup, took it home a further 5 times (2444, 2454, 2457, 2474, 2488).

Alas they never survived the collapse of the NAF. Financially destitute, they returned to Albion to take a up strange game where you kicked the ball instead!

Creveland Crescents

This former AFC Eastern team has a long history of underachieving. Yes, they won the Blood Bowl in 2476, but the player strike was just starting and their opponents were the Greenfield Grasshuggers!! The Green and Whites have always boasted rosters full of talent but rarely turn it into results. They were the first outfit Bob Bifford played for in his rookie year, gave a home to Rotten Rick Bupkeis while he was alive and enjoyed the Ninja skills of Hoshi Komi as well as the dancing thrills from the deadly Harry "The Hammer" Kehry. Just a shame they couldn't build on such talents! Now they're a shadow of themselves, reduced to being a touring team since 2488

In name only!

The Blood Bowl world is vast and so there are loads of teams out there that we know exist . . . but we don't know anything about them at all!

Here is a quick shout out to the Human teams we know in name only...

- Albion All-Stars
- Altdorf Griffons
- Armageddon Avengers
- Bordeleaux Ravens
- Carroburg Crusaders
- Golden Griffons
- Leitdorf United
- Lions of Couronne
- Middenham United
- Nuln River Boaters
- Paravon Penetrators
- Reikland Riot Girls
- Rostov Renegades
- Talabheim Morningstars
- Team Errant

Altdorf All-Stars

The All-Stars were only formed for one brief and glorious season. They were made up of players from the Reikland Reavers, Middenheim Maulers and the Altdorf Avengers.

Led by Griff Oberwald they made the Blood Bowl final in 2503 only to see their dreams crushed at the hands of Count Luthor von Drakenborg.

Fighting Talk!

Both the Nuln Oilers and Nuln Ironflanks are famous for just one thing - losing bar room brawls!

Trophy Cabinet

*Whiteskull Challenge Cup
Winners (2431)*

Purity Cup Winners

Those paying close attention to the dates will note that somehow, the Crusaders won the Whiteskull Challenge Cup 10 years before they were officially formed. . . .

Recruitment Policy

All players must be extremely physically fit (it's a tough game after all) and need to prove they are mentally sane (as outlined in the Holy Guidelines of the sixth Appendix) and to have memorized the rules by heart inside out. As the rules currently come in 14 volumes, each 1000 pages long, that's a lot of reading!

Typically, only Humans tend to play on the Bright Crusaders but that there have been instances where Dwarfs have been signed.

Staff

Ingrid the Pious was the owners and spiritual leader of the Bright Crusaders, but over the years she employed a string of different head coaches including -

- Dolph "The Saint" Gurmman
- Father E.A. "The Padre" Matten
- Kurt Heilger

Clearly coaching the Crusaders requires the patience of a saint!

The Bright Crusaders

- By Rusty Hoelle

The Bright Crusaders have veered between the quiet, noble grace of a Knightly Order and the wide-eyed fanaticism of an extreme cult of Nuffle. Neither grace nor undiluted faith however seems to have brought them much luck on the pitch. They play be an extreme code and don't believe in bending even the most minor of laws, making them really stand out from all of their peers.

History

2417 - An orphaned child is adopted by the Order of the Unchallenged Call, a devout sect in the Nuffle faith, she is given the name Ingrid.

2438 - Now a young woman, Ingrid goes on the Prime Stadium Circuit Pilgrimage but is appalled by what she saw. The lack of faith troubled her greatly and so she prayed

2441 - Having found financial backers, Ingrid sets up the Bright Crusaders and goes about trying to recruit players who meet her very, very exacting standards

2449 - Finally Ingrid has enough players to start a team! The team don't perform that well however and results are hard to come by

2463 - Results start to change when Peter Lowenhart joins from the Rostov Renegades. The star Blitzer brings some actual talent and not just blind faith to the team and introduces the famous "Left Hook" formation, winning many games.

2472 - The infamous Quagmire incident match takes place against the Elfheim Eagles. The Eagles wizards cast the Quagmire spell 93 times during the game causing the Crusaders stadium to sink into the earth and never be seen again. The Colleges of Magic were forced to change the rules, limiting teams to just one wizard per game.

2485 - The Crusaders match against the Dark Renegades was abandoned due to lack of balls! Dark Elf Pinespite Venge had a mutation where he secreted a sticky substance from his body and all 19 match balls stuck to him, breaking a NAF record!

2489 - Following the collapse of the NAF, the Crusaders got into financial trouble and called in a team of accountants. As soon as they showed their books to the accountants the Crusaders were closed immediately due to their financial peril!

Cross Dressing

Another clash with the Elfheim Eagles was called off due to the Crusaders new uniforms and the weather. It was raining and so the Elfs may get muddy was reason enough, but the hideous designs the Crusaders wore were so last season darling! However, the Crusaders do have a crack squad of Nuns to buff their armour mid-game should it ever get dirty during a game.

Thanks Fairy Much

The Bright Crusaders were the very first team to play a match against a Forest Folk team made up of Brownies, Pixies, Gnomes and Centaurs. The game was close as the scantily clad fairies proved a distraction even for the super pious Crusader players.

Bad Bay Hackers

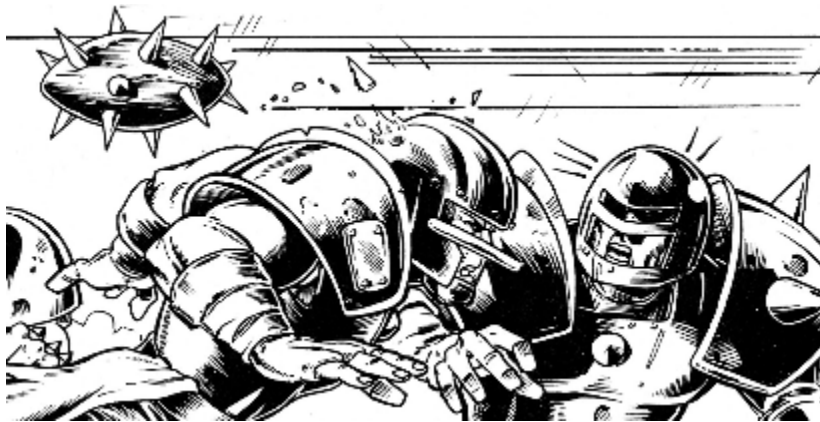

- By Lastiges Weisschen

The Hackers under the leadership of Captain 'Peg'Leg' Haaken prove that with the right ingredients, any team can enjoy success.

Emblazoned in Green and Yellow, the Hackers have shot through the Blood Bowl ranks in recent years. Their rise to fame was kick started with the signing of star thrower Dunkel Hoffnung. It wasn't too long before they had poached Dirk Heldmann and Spinne Schonheit from the Reavers. These three along with Ogre M'Grash KThragsh and Blitzter Rhett Cavre formed the nucleus of a powerhouse team.

The Hackers have enjoyed a great deal of success winning the Blood Bowl (2560), making the final on two other occasions (2558, 2559) as well as winning the Spike! Magazine Open (2560, 2561) and the Tobazco Cup (2561).

Known to play anywhere, the Hackers games have taken them to the new world and the realm of chaos itself. Along the way they have suffered a high casualty rate and have used Undead, Treemen, Pygmies and Beastmen to pad out their roster. At times they are hardly human at all!

That's Magic!

Talabheim Titans - Who could forget the infamous match where a miscast spell caused the players, fans and cheerleaders to all switch bodies? Hilarious!

Hamblinn Bushwackers - A magical Piper played a tune and made the Bushwackers opponents, the Skaven Wyrdstone Wanderers, vanish never to be seen again. Strangely the Bushwackers coach is also missing!

Lucky Sevens - A team of the unluckiest players ever banded together and then couldn't lose. Fate or magic?

Altdorf Hammers

Hammers fans need patience to watch their team play. A highly religious outfit, they only take to the astrogranite when the twin tailed comet can be seen in the sky.

Famous for one thing . . .

Some teams rarely if ever gain any fame. Some seek to buy renown, however. You would probably never of heard of the Averland Knights or the Hochland Lumberjacks if they hadn't have hired Bob Bifford for a season.

Middenplatz Manglers

Under the dubious leadership of Tyros Bundt, they follow the mantra 'Manglers never lose!'. Sadly, this is rarely the case. Despite winning the Doom Bowl, they've rarely known success. It's doubtful whether they should be considered a Human team at all in recent seasons after they hired Franco Fiducci the Necromancer. Most of their players are now Undead!

Averheim Archers

To their shame, the Archers were the first team to ever lose against the Lowdown Rats. The resulting riots from both teams forced the officials to reverse the results giving the win to the Archers - normal order had been restored!

Port D'Aquitaine – the other Reavers

- By Pierce d'Organ

Campaigning as one of the oldest teams in far Bretonnia, the Blue and White Reavers formed in 2387 have a more recent history of courting controversy.

One of the founding 4 teams of the Bretonnian league, the Reavers were the first team in the knightly lands to use team colours to help their players distinguish friend from foe. They were also the first Bretonnian team to construct a purpose-built stadium in 2399 which they dubbed the Rose Bowl due to the locals showering winning teams in roses.

Names matter and the Reikland Reavers sued Port D'Aquitaine over the name Reavers. Despite the Bretonnians using the name for over 100 years they lost and in 2492 were forced to become Port D'Aquitaine Power.

In following year in 2493 they found themselves in trouble with the RARG who deemed that teams of all Knights were unfair and so passed a ruling forcing Bretonnian teams to field lowly peasants as well!

Ever chivalrous, they were voted Spike! Magazines team most likely to play fair in 2473, 2488 and 2498. Success in recent years has been rare with only the Orcidas Team of the Year trophy (2484) gathering dust in their trophy cabinet.

Gone and mostly forgotten

Black Mountain Marauders - Baron Kurt Herzgerwoden promised to cover the players in gold if they won the Border Princes Cup. They did by fielding a giant causing the Baron and the team to go bust!

Haffenheim Hornets - Mistaken for a pre-match snack in 2460 and eaten out of existence by the Oldheim Ogres!

Stirland Hotspurs - In a match against the Slaaneshi Sidewinders, the Slaanesh scrimmage line mutated into Chaos Spawn and merged with the Hotspurs team in a giant fleshy mess! Yuck!

Altdorf Ale-Hole

The Ale-Hole is a seedy pub in Altdorf that has its own Street Bowl team. They tell a tale in about former players in their amateur team who went on to make it big. A stable lad called Griff and a bouncer named Zug.

Kicking it

They do things differently in Albion and their teams rarely travel to foreign shores. During the FA cup the spend more time kicking the ball - madness! Therefor who has ever heard of the Kentish Kickers, Kingsbury Royals, New Albion Patriots, Notting Knights or the Blighty Blighters?

On the up . . . ?

Nordland Rangers - Lack of form saw the Rangers tumble down to the minor league 3 seasons ago. However, Blitzter Garr "The Thunderbolt" Greyg is back in form and they've just won promotion back to the big time.

Hochland Harbringers - Struggling to be average, the Harbringers have been on a number of decent cup runs since Blitzter Dreng Sturnblud returned from retirement. A team to watch next season!

Who's Who Humanity's finest and quite frequently Humanity's deadest.

Please note, the below does not include players who are exclusively play for the Reikland Reavers or any humans just playing in non-Human teams i.e. Old World Alliance, Imperial Nobility, Amazons, Norse, Chaos Renegades and Vampires.

Editors notes:

Some of the players, staff and officials listed here may no longer be considered entirely human . . . but they were once when they started and so their 'human' selves are listed with their human originating teams.

The players here are also from a myriad of timelines - there are quite a number of decades from when we last saw Massif Bofine on the pitch (he would be considered a Gold Era star) compared to when the Bad Bay Hackers were formed.

Normally at Gridiron Gazette we would respect the wishes of officials to remain racially non-specific. However, due to the need to catalogue as many as possible, a number of assumptions have been made on some of these officials being human. Likewise, others have been missed out (such as Nikk Threehorn) who will appear in a later issue more themed to them.

Looking ahead

In issue 2 of the Gridiron Gazette we'll be focused on one team to finish off the Human review - the Reikland Reavers! Yes those glory boys have a history so rich that we can devote an entire issue to the Reavers and all of their staff and fans.

We'll be Answering at such questions as

- What is it with Griff Oberwald's teeth?
- Talking of teeth . . . why does Mighty Zug have so many . . . ?
- Just how many Griegor Meissen's are there?

For all that and so much more, join us next month for a Reavers Gazette special - huzzah!
